

UK and Ireland Radio Stations in 1995

By 1995, AM/FM simulcasting had largely ended with three new national stations and a network of local oldies stations having replaced Radios 1 to 3 and independent local radio on AM. In FM, the upgrade to the BBC's national networks was largely complete, both BBC and independent local radio was available in most parts of the country, and Classic FM had launched. The final segment of VHF band II, 105-108 MHz was released for broadcasting in 1995 and was initially used only in the London area due to delays in the Radio Authority's licensing process.

The BBC's national DAB service launched in 1995, initially broadcasting to the London area only. However, affordable receivers were some years away. A number of radio stations also broadcast via the analogue satellite TV system.

BBC National Radio

All stations are based in London. Programmes are also made in Belfast, Birmingham, Bristol, Cardiff, Glasgow & Manchester and by Independent producers. Radios 1, 2, 3 and 5 Live broadcast 24 hours a day. See tables at end for details of BBC FM network.
